Football in Indonesia

No other sport is as popular as football in Indonesia. In the 1970s, Indonesia ranked along one of Asia's leading football nations. In 1991, they won the South East Asian Games. Earlier on – in Melbourne in 1956 – they had qualified for their first and only Olympic Football Tournament. Several players are now playing or used to play in foreign leagues. The most famous names are Ricky Jacob (Kashima Football Club in Japan), Bima Sakti (in Sweden) and Kurniawan (in Switzerland).

Goal project

For reasons beyond the association's control, it proved impossible to implement the project to build a national training centre approved by the Goal Bureau on 1 May 2003, as a result of which the project was re-submitted to the Bureau on 21 March 2007 in a revised form. The project now involves the partial renovation of a training centre in order to adapt it to the concept of a "house of football", i.e. a central location incorporating the association's headquarters, classrooms, accommodation for overnight stays, a futsal hall, a swimming pool, several football pitches and other facilities for national teams. The centre will bring the association's administrative and technical facilities together under one roof and is expected to produce good results across the board. The area used by the association occupies slightly more than a third of the entire complex, whose owner has signed a lease for more than 30 years with the Football Association of Indonesia (PSSI). The complex is also home to Indonesian Premier League club Pelita Jaya.

Women's football

When, in 1995, today's FIFA President said "The future of football is feminine", it was more than mere lip service. It reflected a strong belief in the huge potential that women's football has to develop. Ever since, FIFA has given targeted support for the efforts of associations who offer women the same opportunities to develop as male players. Launched in 1998, FIFA's Financial Assistance Programme (FAP) introduced a requirement in 2004 for the associations and confederations to invest at least 4% of their FAP funding into women's football. This threshold was increased to 10% in 2005. On top of this commitment, FIFA also promotes the women's game in more general ways by directly financing women's matches and organising competitions and symposiums. Thanks to its development programmes, FIFA is also playing an active role in the training of administrators, coaches, referees and sports doctors.
