Trophy

The design shows six pillars representing the teams competing in the FIFA Club World Cup – with the individual structure making reference to the winner of the competition. The graceful curves are reaching up to encompass the globe in the shape of a football – a consistent feature amongst almost all of FIFA’s event trophies. The shape of the structure describes the competitive energy and athletic qualities demonstrated by the participating teams.

History

Intercontinental and Toyota Cup

Between 1960 and 1968, the Intercontinental Cup was a competition endorsed by UEFA and CONMEBOL and contested between the winners of the European Champions' Cup and the South American Copa Libertadores. The system of play was a home-and-away series, decided by points only (the same format used by CONMEBOL to determine the winner of the Copa Libertadores final until 1987). Because of this format, a third match was needed when both teams were tied on points.

From 1969 to 1979, the Intercontinental Cup continued as a two-leg competition between the UEFA and the CONMEBOL club champions. However, it adopted the European standard method to decide the winner by adding the goals of both matches to the aggregate score.

As of 1980 and until 2004, the competition was held as a single match in Tokyo and Yokohama, Japan. It was called the Toyota Cup, named after its sponsor.

FIFA Club World Cup

The first FIFA Club World Cup was held in 2000 in Brazil with the participation of the club champions of all six confederations (AFC, CAF, CONCACAF, CONMEBOL, OFC and UEFA). In addition to those six teams, two additional competitors were invited: Real Madrid from Spain as the Toyota Cup winner of 1998 and the Brazilian host team, Corinthians, who went on to win the trophy.

In 2005 the Toyota Cup merged with the FIFA Club World Cup. This competition has since been played under the auspices of FIFA and between the club champions from the 6 Confederations (UEFA's and CONMEBOL's representative entering the competition in the semi-finals).

As from 2007 the host's top team has also participated. In 2007, as a Japanese team won the AFC Champions League, the highest placed non-Japanese team of the AFC Champions League had a play-off for the quarter-finals with the OFC representative.

After four consecutive years of Japan's hosting of the FIFA Club World Cup the competition was awarded to the United Arab Emirates for two years before returning to Japan for another two editions. In 2013 host nation Morocco provided a superb setting for the tournament, with good-sized crowds at all the matches and a magnificent atmosphere throughout. The FIFA Club World Cup will be held again in Morocco between 10 and 20 December 2014.
